The National Service Scheme (NSS) in collaboration with Indian Coast Guard and My green Society had organised a Beach Cleanup Drive on the occasion of International Coastal Cleaning Day at Worli Koliwada. The NSS volunteers of Xavier Institute of Engineering (XIE) Mahim, had actively participated in this cleanup drive.

The NSS volunteers reached the beach at 7:00 am and started their work with great enthusiasm. The volunteers were well equipped with brooms, big garbage bags to collect the waste. Gloves were provided to everyone to ensure a neat and clean drive without anyone getting diseased or infected because of the garbage around. Volunteers were instructed to collect only plastic like food wrappers, bags, etc. It was slightly raining but few drops of rain didn't stop the volunteers who were filled with excitement and spirit to do a good cause. Total 457 kg of litter were collected by our NSS volunteers. The efforts of everyone for a noble cause made the cleanliness campaign more successful and motivating.

This event definitely made a difference and changed people's mindset and will to clean not just beaches but natural surroundings and also not litter in the first place. Then we took pledge where the NSS volunteers pledged to keep surroundings clean and not to use single use plastic bags and motivate others to do the same. This experience was very overwhelming. Refreshment were given and then event ended at 10:30 Am.

This is the day which taught NSS volunteers how the dispose of plastic affects the natural surroundings and why to dispose them properly, why we should not use single use plastic and the importance of cloth bags over plastic bags.
